

Internet Law

COJK remains at the forefront of internet law or cyber law, counseling major corporations as well as small businesses, public sector entities, and individuals on the complex IP issues that arise from the use of the internet.

Our attorneys utilize their in-depth knowledge of domestic and international laws in providing comprehensive IP counsel and protection to our clients. Our acute awareness of the need for businesses, artists, and authors to closely guard their market presence or works by defending trademarks, copyrights, and domain names is deeply ingrained in our firm culture.

COJK offers the following comprehensive range of services related to internet law:

- Defense and prosecution of domain name arbitration proceedings, including Uniform Domain-Name Dispute-Resolution Policy (UDRP) cases
- Defense and prosecution of federal litigation relating to domain names and copyright infringement on the internet
- Digital rights management
- Internet publishing
- Investigations of infringement or wrongful use of a domain name that incorporates a client's trade name or trademark
- Portfolio management
- Protection of privacy rights
- Registration applications, transfers, and maintenance
- Search and clearance opinions for domain use in view of trademark and anticybersquatting laws
- Technological reviews for compliance with Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA)
