Cory Claassen brings over 20 years of patent law experience to his practice, focusing on the preparation and prosecution of U.S. and foreign patents in the electrical, optical, and mechanical fields. Cory's practice extends to patent infringement and validity opinions, patent portfolio management, and intellectual property strategy and counseling. He provides these services to clients across a diverse array of technologies, including semiconductor devices, electronics, display and imaging technologies, unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs), applied optics, fiber optics, applied physics, micro-electro-mechanical systems (MEMS), medical devices, and circuits.

Prior to practicing law, Cory was an ASIC designer at Nortel Semiconductors and a microwave engineer at Norsat International Inc. He holds a B.A.Sc. in physics and electrical engineering from the University of British Columbia, and a J.D. from Santa Clara University School of Law. Cory is named to the list of The Best Lawyers in America.
